By Sruli and Mendy Portnoy - (somewhere) about the arc-á ě ĩ s co-written by two Jews of New York, born of Russian and Lithuanian parents, of tongue omnio. The letters were banked by Yip Harburg (Isidore Hochberg) and Harold "Hyman" Arlen wrote the music. Although the music is written by its use in "the Wizard of Oz", attracts the themes of the Zionist movement expressing an yearning for a year. It is strangely similar to a written music ten years before the Hebrew poet born Russian Shaul Tchernichovsky, Á á Ć Á "they say there is a land á ě ĩ" (1923). Only writers know if these similarities have been deliberate or, perhaps they have been influenced, even subconsciously by something "in the air", a sense of times, as can happen to artists. Anyway, like two sisters who dreamed of living in Israel and are privileged enough to have seen our dream reality, we feel that this would be our most appropriate tribute for the 70th year of Israel's independence. This is dedicated to the dreamers. For those with the forecast, which literally gave their lives so that we can be here today and for those who came after them who have made these dreams a reality. "And the dreams you dare to dream / really come true." This is for all us, if we dare. (Á á ě ĩ" - á ě" - á ě" Á ě ě" National appropriation for the arts.) YouTube / GoogleDoodles Múxico Hawaiian Israel Kamakawiwo'OLE, also Known as Bruddah Iz, it would have been 61 today, a fact that Google is celebrating with a doodle and animated video honoring the music, which is hearing her render of Á á Ć œHere on the arc-á ě ĩ - Tossed in Ukulele with a traditionally Hawaiian musical sound. Kamakawiwo'OLE may have become better known worldwide for this song - which was recorded in a single takes a night in 1988 and did not win popularity until after his death in 1997 - but their realizations in music and defense are broad and left a Indeect brand in Hawaiian culture. Kamakawiwo'OLE launched 15 alkans with the band he formed with his sister and three friends, named Makaha Sons of NiÄº á 'Ihau, before he dies of respiratory questions, heart and other people with the age of 38 years. In addition, Kamakawiwo', who was born in the same year when Hawaiiah became the 50th state, was a defender of Hawaiian independence, using his lyrics of sovereignty desire, as well as the environmental protection of natural wonders of the islands. In honor of the man who Known as Á á ě ĩ ± ' Director Sophie Diao was aware of properly paying the homage to earth and the culture that he did not only love, but he fought to protect. In an interview on Doodle's creation published by Google, it relates as his research and conversations with his producer, Jon de Mello and Viuva, Marlene Kamakawiwo allowed her to integrate elements that were genuinely important to Kamakawiwo'OLE For example, including the images of your favorite flower, plumeria, which grows abundantly in Hawaiiah. "Doodle is full of places in Havaan who had special meaning for Israel Á ě ä," said Diao. Since the Múxico spending more than 20 years, the music took on a song for more, and now it is perhaps the most popular composition of all time by a Hawaiian artist. On Thursday, we celebrated the 62th anniversary of the afternoon, Great Israel KamakawiwoÄ ě á, "Ole, better known by many of us as Bruddah Iz. The legendary Hawaiian and music singer left an indelible brand in the fans, and the Hawaiian musical industry. Their songs are valued by the people of Havaan, a particular music has brought him worldwide recognition. In that music from 1993, 1993, About the rainbow / that a wonderful world, "is a mixture of Judy Garland's classics and Louie Armstrong, but still is distinctly iz. The music was first recorded in a 3-am improvised session With Milan Bertosa, who was at the end of a long day in his Honolulu recording studio. The NPR reported, Bertosa told a client connected with Bruddah Iz that he was hung up, call tomorrow. But the customer insisted on putting the KamakawiwoÄ ě á ě - Á "OLE on the phone." And he is very sweet, well educated, like. "Please can I come in? I have an idea - "Bertosa reminds Kamakawiwo" Ola saying. He arrived at the next 15 minutes. "I put some microphones, make a quick sound spot, roll, and the first thing he does is" somewhere on the rainbow. . He played and sang, a take, and it ended, "said Bertosa. The next day, Bertosa made a copy and filed the original record. Then, in 1993, Bertosa ended up working as an engineer for the Mountain Apple Company , a long house of engraving-established, where KamakawiwoÄ ě á, "Ole was doing what would become the best-selling Hawaiian Album of all time. This year, the music received the distinction. To be added to the library of the National Congress Registry, together with 24 recordings "worthy of preservation for all times based on their cultural, historical or estate importance in the solid Herança registered in the nation. "The first Hawaiian Album Platinum - This single was an international success, and he had a sustained life through s of your use in movies, commercial television programs, "said the National Recording of Recording. The conversation left to understand the meaning of honor. Here are the high lights of an interview With Matthew Barton, the sound curator recorded in the Library of Congress - edited by length and clarity. As the pieces are selected for the national registration registration, registration registration was a continuing effort for 20 years to Mount 25 recording at a time, a year, not simply a corridor of fame, but a body of records that represent, not only great moments, but great moments that really speak to us in music - but also m in poetry and speeches and transmissions. If you pass through the list, you will see that, in addition to all these performances Musical, there are radio transmissions, great moments in sports captured in the radio and recordings of nature. All reflect, in many ways, in many aspects experience. And this is true for something like "somewhere on the rainbow," which has now been heard by incontestable á á ě œMill of people. And it is true for recordings that are very obscure and have not heard by many people, but are very significant. When these lists are released every year, something to consider is that there are famous recordings, but look at both sides ... Think of the recordings in there that you may have not heard of or never heard, as in the same level than those who are known for millions. The meaning of "somewhere on the rainbow / a wonderful world" that is so known, but only that is not enough. It's the first and for many people, perhaps, still the only song by Iz that they have heard. He had a huge impact on the continent. Therefore, it was a recent instance in the way the Hawaiian music reached the continent. Gabby Pahinui and Sol Ho? OPI? I was two artists who did it in earlier times. So it was really a bit added to the national soundtrack. In addition to being just a wonderful performance, I think it is a good addition in which the other recordings represent the two great guitar traditions of the Hawaiiah, a wreck and the guitar of Aä $0. And Iz is representing the great vocal traditions of the Hawaiian and also ukulele.on, including Hawaiian musicians in the library of the addiction of Congressin, to have the greatest collection of books, we have the largest collection of Hawaiian music are represented. I will not say we have each one. There have been much more Hawaiian recordings than many Mainlanders can perceive, but we have a strong collection of Hawaiian records - but it is not complete. If you came back, you would find in our artists as Gabby Pahinui, for example. He's on the record now. We have other Hawaiian artists returning to very early, the beginning of the 1900s. On the conscious effort to include a diverse selection of sound recording goes through several steps: There is the national preservation framework Recording, and anyone can make a suggestion, an online name on the library site. We are always looking back and saying, "What is not yet here, who is not here?" If you get to a certain stage with this, but all recordings are the same period of 25 or 30 years, is like: "Okay, something is wrong here. We have to open it." So, this is always a consideration. As the public can hear the record library are personally accessible, although the library is basically closed to the public now because of the pandemic. There are, however, many older records online at LOC.Gov/jukebox. There is a page that we call the National Jukebox which is about 15,000 recordings made from the 1890s to 1925 and in fact includes many Hawaiian recordings exist. The record "somewhere on the rainbow" at the beginning, he dedicates to Gabby Pahinui. It's like, both in the registry, both are talking to each other in this way.
